

Broadband transmission over power lines has potential for interference to radio services and should be tested thoroughly before any decision is made. Interference is not acceptable.